IF&W is willing to finance town boat launch in Gilead

By ALISON ALOISIO
Gilead residents Saturday heard a proposal from the Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife to use town land on the Androscoggin River for a state-built boat launch.

The 30 people who attended a public hearing on the issue were divided in their views on the issue. Some welcomed the plan for improved access to the river, while others worried a new launch might "turn the river into the Saco River."

An article on the question is expected to appear on the Town Meeting warrant in March.

Permanent easement?
The town land is located across Bridge Street from an existing, privately-owned launch.

The hearing was called in response to a request made last year by Rocky Freda to establish a new launch. Freda, of Sun Valley Sports in Bethel, said the current one is difficult for older and handicapped people to use.

But some residents still have their reservations about proposal.

Leon Bucher of IF&W attended Saturday's meeting.

"I'm here to work with the town to work to obtain permanent legal access for the public, so they can access the river safely," he said. "It would be a win-win situation for everyone. The state has a very successful fish stocking program on the Upper Androsoggin, and the river is becoming more accessed."

Bucher said the state would provide funds to build a concrete boat ramp and parking area. But to make that investment, he said, "We would want a permanent easement."

Revoking such an easement would take an act of the Legislature, he said.

He estimated one to two acres would be needed for the launch area.

As for maintenance, Bucher said, the involvement of other municipalities with state launches located in their towns varies widely.

"Sometimes they're very involved, and they manage it, and we just check annually to see how things are going," he said. "At the other end of the Engineer describes improvements needed to upper Sunday River Rd.

By ALISON ALOISIO
At the annual Town Meeting in March, Newry voters will consider an improvement project for the upper Sunday River Road that could include widening it by approximately seven feet.

Engineer Jim Sysko last week presented to selectmen a study of the four-mile section of road, beginning at the Monkey Brook Road intersection.

Selectmen hired him for the work after the Planning Board expressed concerns the road is not up to town standards. Sysko did not include cost estimates for the project.

"The ongoing development in the upper Sunday River Valley requires that the town undertake reasonable improvements for the safety of all those using the road," Sysko wrote in a letter to the board. "Also, since this road is the only access to a large area of developable land in Newry and Riley, it should be brought up to a standard that will not impede access for emergency equipment and commercial vehicles. As it stands now, the road has areas that do not even meet Newry's secondary road standards."

Sysko told selectmen he found that much of the road measured between 17 and 18 feet in width, with the narrowest section 16.5 feet.

There is conflicting information in town ordinances regarding primary road standards, he said. In one place, standards call for a 22-foot width and four-foot shoulders, while in another the width is 20 feet with two-foot shoulders.

The road below the Monkey Brook intersection meets primary standards, town officials said.

Sysko included the following recommendations in his report:

1) Improve the road section up to at least Nordic Knoll

SAD44 SATs below state's

By ALISON ALOISIO
Last year — the first year that the SAT test was used in place of the Maine Educational Assessment — Telstar juniors fell below the state average in the three subjects tested, the SAD44 School Board learned Monday.

Results

Principal Ted Davis presented the test results to the School Board at Monday's meeting. Because this was the first class to take the SATs, it is difficult to compare performances with previous years, when the MEA was used, according to state officials.

The scale for SAT scores runs from 200 to 800.

In the SAT's critical reading section, last year's juniors scored an average of 428, compared to the state average of 443.

In writing, the Telstar average was 398, compared to 435.

In math, Telstar juniors scored 407, compared to 444.

Among 20 other high schools in this region, Telstar was near the top in reading, near the bottom in math, and in the lower third in writing.

Most of the schools were below the state average in all the subjects.

Abutter's attorney argues Planning Board's decision on Funky Red Barn flawed

By MICHAEL DANIELS
The Bethel Board of Appeals wants to go back to the audiotape before voting on a challenge to a recent Planning Board decision regarding the Funky Red Barn.

On Oct. 26 of last year the Planning Board voted that there had been no "change of use" at the Summer Street restaurant and bar, hence there was no need for it to go through a site plan review.

The matter came to the Planning Board on remand from town selectmen, who had been approached by Mark Egeberg, an abutter of the business.

Egeberg and his attorney, Dana Hanley of South Paris, argued that because of various changes that had taken place since the business opened (under different ownership) in October 1987, it had become subject to site plan review.

The selectmen referred the matter to the Planning Board, but not before going on record unanimously to say that for their part they did not believe a change of use had taken place.

After looking into the matter, the Planning Board agreed, also unanimously.

Their formal "Decision on Determination of Change of Use Findings of Fact," notes individual Planning Board votes on 31 separate performance standards.

All but three of those votes were also unanimous in finding that there had been "no significant impact" on the performance standard under dis-

Waterford transfer station manager claims selectmen are trying to dump her

By G.E. TWINE
Waterford transfer station manager Rockie Graham says she's being fired, but town selectmen say that is not the case — they are just moving her to another position.

Town officials say that in the new position Graham will research ways to save money at the facility that serves Waterford, Stoneham and Albany and Mason townships.

However, selectmen and the chairman of the Transfer Station Committee will not say if she will be returned to manager in the future.

This is not the first instance of tension between Graham and the Waterford board.

In May 2006, in response to a letter of complaint about Graham, the selectmen asked her to resign as manager.

"I refused and asked to face my accusers," Graham said during a phone interview. "Then later, the person who wrote that letter said, 'I don't want her fired that was not my intent.' A room full of people supported me. Selectmen put me on 30-day probation and neglected to officially take me

Last summer's tragedy prompts grief workshop

By ALISON ALOISIO
The Bethel Family Health Center and other organizations have teamed up to offer a four-part, free workshop on grief counseling and support. The effort is a result of requests received through the BFHC, organizers said.

"Recognizing and Coping with Loss and Grief" begins Saturday at the West Parish Congregational Church, with "An Overview of Grief."

Other dates include Feb. 10 ("How Teens and Children Grieve Differently"); March 3 ("How to Cope with Unexpected and Traumatic Loss"); and March 17 ("How to Deal with Depression Following Loss and Grief"). All will take place at the church, from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Dianna Milot, practice manager at BFHC, said requests for grief counseling came in the wake of the quadruple murders that took place in Newry in September.

At that time, she said, area church groups and schools offered support counseling.

But, she said, "It's also needed because everyone grieves for someone sometime in their life. We wanted to offer something to everyone, of all ages."

She said there is generally a shortage of free counseling offered within easy transportation reach of Bethel.

The workshops will not be therapy sessions, said organizers Wendy Iseman and Rosabelle Tift. Instead, the gath-

HEALING QUILTS

When Helen Parent's husband, Edward, died last year, she kept putting off going through his clothes and other things. But when her friend, Donna Gillis, offered to use clothing pieces to make a quilt in his memory, Helen found the energy to look for special articles. "They brought back so many good memories," she said. Donna made a quilt that featured the emblems from favorite T-shirts. Many of the shirts represented places where the couple had traveled and played golf. One shirt sported a Red Sox logo — important because Edward had lived to see his favorite team win the World Series in 2004. Donna named the quilt, "Days to Remember." "It really helped me," said Helen. Gillis also made a second one for her, which incorporated material from a dress shirt, plaid shirts, golf shirts and a particularly special shirt that, said Helen, "he always wore." Gillis created a pin-wheel pattern with the material, and titled the quilt "Take a Spin Through the Life of Edward Parent." Gillis started doing such quilts for friends last year. She said she would also consider making them as a business arrangement, and may be contacted at 836-3953 or 824-3637.

SUGGESTED SEVERAL FINDINGS, BUT DID NOT 'DRAFT' LIST

To the Editor:

Re: Citizen article in Jan. 18 issue regarding Greenwood Planning Board's approval of Jonathan Wells' site plan application. I read the above-mentioned article with interest. I'm compelled to correct your assertion that the findings of fact following the public hearing of the matter were drafted by yours truly. Edith, my wife, and I left town, indeed the U.S. for three weeks two days after the hearing. I did suggest several of the "findings" to Kim Sparks verbally, just prior to our departure. The first time I saw the "draft" of findings occurred at the meeting concerned in your article. At that point, I would have liked to spend some time to review/augment them. Having been absent from the prior board meeting, I could not impose that on the board. Given another month, I'm sure we would have produced a more complete, polished document. I'm equally certain that the outcome would not have changed.

Many of your concerns appear to echo those of Attorney Dilworth as voiced at the subject meeting. That brings to mind another concern of mine. No member of the Kaplan family was present nor, to my knowledge, does the board have any documentation authorizing Dilworth to speak for them. I believe that documentation is required to authorize any third party representation before the Board.

In any case, I, personally, thank you for enlightenment regarding proper procedure. "There's no substitute for experience."

SKATEBOARD AREA MEETING

To the Editor:

There will be an informal meeting of people interested in developing a new skateboard area at Davis Park. The meeting will be held on Wednesday, Jan. 31 at 3:30 p.m. at the Bethel town office.

All interested parties are welcome to attend. The event will not last more than an hour.

While there is general agreement that the current skateboard area is too small, a specific course of action is unclear. Limited ground space and proximity to the river make significant improvements a challenge. And striking the right balance between true needs and available money is a task inherent in all town projects. As a first step, the town has engaged a consultant to prepare necessary application materials for submission to state environmental regulators. We'll go from there.

All of this and more will be discussed on the 31st. I hope you can make it.

RIPPING FAMILIES APART

To the Editor:

My letter hit the paper on Jan. 18, 2007, so did Esther Wilson's. Neither one of us know each other. With this my phone has been ringing off the hook.

Everyone on the other end of the phone was someone's mom or dad sharing the same story: guardians ad litem had destroyed their family or was not fair.

Everyone I talked with so far has done everything they were asked to do, but still got nowhere with the guardian ad litem.

What is wrong with this I ask? When you have 15 to 20 more calls and they all are the same except for their name. We all need to come together and get rid of these guardians ad litem in the courtroom.

I thought their "logo" was to keep a family together and to help, but I found out that their "logo" is how to rip a family apart in 10 minutes.

So with this I ask anyone who has been mistreated by a guardian ad litem to please come forward and let's work together to get them out of the courtroom and maybe we can prevent another family from being destroyed. Don't be scared, let the Lord guide you and he will protect and give you the strength. And if anything let's do it for the children whose lives, emotions and physical well being are being hurt.

REMEMBERING 'GRAMMIE' MURPHY

To the Editor:

To start this letter I want to say how sorry I am that Grammie Murphy is gone from this earth. She was a very kind and loving Christian woman who let people call her Mother Murphy or Grammie Murphy even if they were no blood relation (as it was with me).

She listened to my problems and prayed for me. Told me about the animals she watched out her window, the woodchuck family that raised babies on her lawn or the fox that visited her lawn. She never judged people the way some people do.

Grammie told me once it's up to God to judge us, not her. Sadly missed by.

FIRE RESPONSE THANKS

To the Editor:

We wish to thank all members of the Newry and surrounding fire departments who responded to the call on Dec. 16 to our home on Timberline Drive. They did the best that could be expected to protect surrounded buildings.

Special thanks go to our neighbors Phil and Linda Libby. They provided us with quarters and three meals a day as we fought to salvage personal belongings right up to a few days before Christmas. Phil, along with Eddie Day, of Norway, worked several days helping to recover special items from the ashes.

Fortunately no one was injured in the mishap. The fire completely destroyed the 25-year-old home, but we are committed to rebuild it bigger and better. Thanks again to the many individuals who offered help.

APOLOGIES FOR THE INITIALS

To the Editor:

Last week, we ran a card of thanks in this newspaper. We meant to give special thanks to Androsoggin Home Care & Hospice by name. Instead, we inadvertently mentioned them only by their initials, AHC&H. We apologize for this oversight and once again thank them for their care and compassion.

(just past the Letter S swimming hole) to the dimensions that currently exist at the Harrington garage area, and include a paved bike lane. (The Harrington area includes a 22-foot travel way, a three-foot bike lane and two-foot shoulders, for a 29-foot total width.)

2) Add guard railing in several places (for a total of approximately 1,500 feet);

3) Increase the road elevation at about a mile beyond the Monkey Brook intersection to reduce flooding;

4) Cut down the road elevation at about three miles beyond Monkey Brook (near the Letter S swimming hole) intersection to improve sight distance;

5) Redesign the Nordic Knoll intersection to improve sight distance and;

6) Rebuild the gravel road base from the Nordic Knoll intersection to the town line to facilitate future paving, including a bike lane.

Sysko also noted that some land acquisition would likely be needed for the improvements to proceed.

Plan for future?

Selectman Steve Wight suggested that the decision whether to improve the road to primary standards beyond the Powder Ridge subdivision (about 8 miles from the Monkey Brook intersection) could depend "on what the future holds" for development in the area.

Said Sysko, "There are whole areas in Riley that the [Sunday River] Skiway owns. You have to look at the potential. You're behind the curve if you don't."

He suggested if the town wanted to limit improvements, the work could extend to Nordic Knoll, but not beyond.

Other specifics

Sysko said the current intersection with the Nordic Knoll Road is dangerous for east-bound drivers trying to turn left into the Nordic Knoll subdivision.

Adding fill to the Sunday River Road in that area and placing a warning sign would improve safety, he said.

Sysko also said that a three-foot culvert that carries Eames Brook may need to be replaced with a larger one.

"With the development at Nordic Knoll, there's more runoff," he said. "If the road washes out there, it's a big deal."

He also said a landslide area at about 3.5 miles out should be stabilized, which could require a retaining wall if the road were to be brought up to primary standards.

"The solution would be expensive," Sysko said.

Request for proposals

Selectmen asked Sysko to prepare a "request for proposals" outline, to be sent to contractors.

Selectman Jim Largess said he favored getting estimates for improvements to the entire stretch of road.

The town could then make longer-term plans for the work and break it down into phased projects.

Administrative assistant Loretta Powers said any warrant articles for the annual Town Meeting March 5 would likely not include costs. The contractors' proposals are not due until March 1.

Graham

me off of probation until I pushed it 60 days later. There are only two complaints in my file, fewer than all previous managers."

Graham also said that she has a complaint concerning further inappropriate action by the town filed with the Human Rights Commission.

'Another attempt'

At a special selectmen's meeting, held on Jan. 19, many in another room full of townspeople voiced concern that the current proposal was "another attempt to get rid of Rockie."

Selectmen Norm Rust said, "No, it is not."

When asked would Graham be returned to the position of manager, Selectman Whizzer Wheeler said that he could not answer that question.

Wheeler said town officials had hired an attorney who specialized in personnel matters to review the transfer station. The attorney supported the Transfer Station Committee's position that the transfer station be staffed by two, rather than three, people during the winter months; that Road Commissioner Brad Grover manage the employees; and that Waterford should create a transfer station liaison position.

"In that position, Rockie would act as data gatherer and analyst for the transfer station," Wheeler said, after the meeting was adjourned.

"There are a number of options that we have available to us, such as, at the broadest, going into the recycling business. Rockie will work roughly the same hours at the same pay. Her salary will come from the Transfer Station Committee budget. One week she may work 18 hours and then another week she might work 26 hours."

Paul Legare, chairman of Transfer Station Committee, was not at the Friday meeting.

During a telephone interview later he said: "She will have a flexible schedule and I will give her assignments. We, the committee, have been messing around with this idea for two and a half years. One of the things we wanted to do, in a cost reduction measure, was to reduce the number of people at the transfer station. But we've got some good qualified people. So let's take our best and most literate candidate and put her in this [liaison] position and let her do the work that the committee needs to get done."

When asked if Graham would become transfer station manager again after the research project was done,

Legare said, "I don't know, I can't answer, that is a selectmen's question."

"It's a win-win for us and I feel that Rockie would feel the same way," said Wheeler.

Graham, however, said, "I'm not sure what the position is, they've never defined it."

"They've refused to give it to me on paper. All they've said is that we want to find ways to save money at the transfer station. The only thing that I can see is that they are firing me from my old job. I don't want a job that they can tell me is done after two weeks. The dump has never looked so good and been in such good shape or run so well," Graham said.

Graham, who is a member of the Transfer Station Committee and attends its meetings, added that the liaison position was not what the committee had in mind.

"They wanted to keep the manager and get rid of one of the attendants for the winter," she said.

"I don't know yet if I will accept the job," Graham said. "No matter what they call it, what they've done is fire me from my job. And they want to have someone manage who does not have the training or background."

New fire truck purchase proposed

NEWRY—The Newry Fire Department is proposing to buy a new pumper truck, at an estimated cost of $340,000. Asst. Chief Bruce Pierce made the request last week for a warrant article for the March annual Town Meeting. The 2,500-gallon capacity truck would replace two older ones, a 1980 Ford pumper and a 1969 Maxim tanker/pumper. Pierce said the older trucks are still usable, but do not meet insurance standards for pumping capacity. The department is requesting a new truck because used ones are not available in 2,500-gallon capacity. "It will allow us to come to a fire with some water," he said. Pierce said the purchase would keep the NFD on track with a strategic plan that was recommended in 2000. Since then the town has purchased a tanker truck (2002), ladder truck (2004) and pick-up truck (2006). Pierce said a new pumper would be the last big purchase needed for some time. Selectman Jim Largess asked Pierce to draw up a chart showing a 10-year plan for future equipment replacement purchases.

Comp Plan updates

GILEAD—At a public hearing Saturday night, Gilead Planning Board chairman Jack Pucak said an update to the town's Comprehensive Plan would cost an estimated $5,000. The plan was first developed in 1994, and is intended to guide the establishment of ordinances. Pucak recommended that a Comprehensive Plan Committee be set up to determine the extent of updating needed, and to gather some statistics and other information for the plan. He said the Androscoggin Valley Council of Governments (AVCOG) could be retained as a consultant to guide changes in policy. Voters will consider the proposal at the annual Town Meeting in March. If approved, the updated plan would be ready for a vote at the March 2008 Town Meeting.

Assistance Team helps kids

WOODSTOCK—A new Student Assistance Team has been put in place at Telstar high/middle schools to help students with a variety of problems that might not be addressed by the school's regular structure. THS Dean of Students Charlie Raymond told the School Board Monday. Examples include students who might have a short-term problem with academics, home life or behavior. The team is made up of volunteer staff members and a community representative, and meets regularly to ensure good communication about students in need. "We hope to reach out to kids who usually don't get resources," said Raymond. An informational pamphlet about the team will be sent home with the next report cards, he said. Parents may request help for their children, and students may request it themselves, said Raymond.

Retirement party planned

BETHEL—A "surprise" retirement party is planned for Feb. 10 for Phil Taylor, who recently retired after 17 years of service with the Bethel Police Department. The party will take place at the Bethel Inn Conference Center, beginning at 5:30 p.m., and will feature a buffet dinner, presentations, and a roast of Taylor. Anyone interested in attending is asked to RSVP by Jan. 31 to Mary Merrill (836-2410), Alan Carr (527-2131) or Jack Taylor (824-8805), and send a check for $22.50 (per person) by Feb. 2 to Mary Merrill, P.O. Box 761, Bethel 04217.

Snowshoeing workshops

BETHEL—Snowshoeing workshops will be offered this season by Creative Economies Educational Initiative. Two sessions are available, one for beginners and the second an intermediate level class that will feature more challenging terrain. Participants will meet at True North Adventureware, 196 Walkers Mills Road Bethel. Hike locations will be determined depending on snowcover and weather conditions. The dates: Beginners Session, Jan. 27, 10 a.m.-2 p.m.; Intermediate Hike, Feb. 10, 10 a.m.-4 p.m. The cost is a $5 donation. Snowshoes are available for rental or purchase or participants may bring their own.

Hiker found alive

FRANCONIA, N.H.—A frostbitten hiker who had been missing since Saturday was found Monday on Mount Lafayette, bundled in his sleeping bag with gloves on his feet. Brian Gagnon, a 24-year-old Plymouth State University graduate student, separated from his two friends on Saturday during a whiteout. He had placed calls from his cell phone on Sunday and searchers suspended their efforts that evening in the face of hurricane-force winds. "The temperatures started falling, he burned his map, he burned part of his sleeping pad, he ate some food and left some food there," Brad Morse of the new Hampshire Fish and Game Department said. Rescue workers again found signs of Gagnon about 10:35 a.m. Monday, coming across a water bottle, baseball cap and ski poles. They followed footprints for a mile and found Gagnon about 12:20 p.m. They kept calling out his name, and he finally answered back, sitting upright in his sleeping bag. Gagnon was conscious and aboard a helicopter by 1:20 p.m. and en route to the hospital. "He's alive and well but has suffered some significant frostbite injuries" on his hands and feet, said Col. Jeff Gray, chief of law enforcement for the Fish and Game Department. Gagnon was hospitalized in fair condition Monday night at Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center. Gray said the fact that Gagnon had good winter hiking and camping equipment with him probably saved his life. "In addition, the remarkable team effort by search organizations and the Army National Guard made the difference in safely recovering this man," he said. "He loves his family and I'm sure that's what pulled him through," said his mother, Susan Dow.

spectrum, if the bushes need trimming, the town calls and tells us." Bucher said toilet facilities could also be included at the Gilead site. They might be available for use by snowmobilers in the winter.

Reaction

Selectman Fernand Corriveau said he was concerned that an improved launch would attract so many people the river might resemble the highly-used Saco River. He noted that in years past, the Androscoggin was polluted by paper mills, and he worried increased recreational use could leave it "polluted with people. You can over promote the river."

Jay Milot expressed concern about increased fishing pressure on the river, and the possible effect on the fish population.

Bucher said use of the launch would be limited by the number of parking spaces available.

Signage would direct boaters to other area launches if the lot was full.

Darlene Corriveau suggested that instead of creating a new launch, boaters could simply drive six miles to the next nearest one, in West Bethel.

But resident Alice Strait, who said she kayaks regularly on the river, favored a new launch in town.

At the current launch, she said, "we struggle to get the kayaks into the river. You have to go over rocks to get out into the current."

Beverly Corriveau suggested the state use its money to improve access to the existing launch.

But Bucher said that would require alterations within the river itself, and IF&W would not do that.

In addition, he said, the state would not invest in a private launch site that could later be sold.

The private site is owned by Bayroot LLC.

Selectman Paul Handlen said the Mahoosuc Land Trust has tried to purchase the site, but, he said, Bayroot wants full market value for it.

Beverly Corriveau also worried a new site would encourage partying.

Bucher said IF&W would work with the Sheriff's Department and game wardens to arrange monitoring of activities at the launch.

Bucher said if Gilead decided it wanted complete control over a new launch, the town could apply instead for a grant from the Department of Conservation to improve the site.

Plan prior to meeting

Handlen said selectmen will have a proposal for voters to consider at the Town Meeting.

Selectman Mark Wigley said the plan would be put out to residents before the meeting, so they will have enough time to review it.

Appeal

The three exceptions were in votes on performance standards involving odors, air pollution and parking and traffic circulation.

On the first two of those votes, member Jan Baker did believe there was significant impact, and on the third (traffic and circulation) she was joined by fellow member Pat Carter.

But on the final, overall vote both Baker and Carter joined the rest of the board in finding no significant impact.

And without significant impact, there is no need for a site plan review.

Mistakes alleged

Egeberg responded by appealing the decision; and last week Hanley told the town Appeals Board that the planners "made a number of mistakes in making a determination of findings of fact."

On five questions in particular, Hanley contended the board, "wrongfully interpreted" or "relied on erroneous information" in making its determinations.

Those areas included parking and circulation (including emergency access), signage, exterior lighting, noise, and impact on municipal services (notably police coverage).

He noted, for example, that the diagrams used for determining parking and access were not to scale, and that board members did not conduct a site walk on a Friday or Saturday night, when the business is at its busiest.

"We respectfully request a site walk by the board," Hanley said. "It is clear from the record that no site walk was done to determine exactly how parking and emergency access would happen on busy nights. ... and I believe there is no basis for the board's decision on whether parking or access to the building were significantly affected."

Hanley also noted that on some of the individual standards, the Planning Board's written record did not include testimony that had been presented arguing against the conclusion ultimately reached by the board.

And, he argued, in at least two cases the Planning Board allowed the town code enforcement officer to render decisions that were the responsibility of the board to make.

Time out to listen

Eventually the Appeals Board agreed to adjourn last week's meeting, in order to give members time to review the tape of the Planning Board hearing for themselves.

"There clearly is more on the tape than what there is on the paper," said member Francis Dumont. "I'd like to go back and listen to it. It could be good, it could be bad, but at least it would be fair to both sides."

The Appeals Board will take up the matter when it reconvenes on Wednesday, Jan. 31.

Board down to three

Two of the Appeals Board's five members did not take part in last week's discussion. Chairman Harry Faulkner and member Kirk Siegel resuscitated themselves.

Faulkner, who had sold the business (then known as "The Backstage") to its current owner, Barry Hallett, cited "an apparent conflict of interest."

Siegel stepped down because he is a member of Hanley's law firm.

That leaves three voting members for the Jan. 31 meeting: Dumont, Lennie Shaw and Acting Chairman Wende Gray.

Gender comparison

Across the state and at Telstar, there was a consistent gender gap among the juniors in the three areas tested.

At Telstar, the gap was more pronounced in reading and writing. But in math, the gap at Telstar was not quite as great as it was statewide.

In critical reading, Telstar girls scored 441, while boys scored 411. Statewide, the numbers were 451 and 436, respectively.

In writing, Telstar girls scored 431, and boys 359. Statewide figures were 454 and 417.

In math, the gap was reversed. Telstar girls scored 402, and boys 413. Statewide, girls scored 437 and boys 450.

As it did with the MEAs, the state also breaks down each school's results according to whether the students exceed, meet, partially meet, or do not meet a set standard for test performance.

When it came to meeting the standards, in all three subjects a somewhat smaller percentage of Telstar juniors made the grade compared to state averages.

Only two percent of Telstar juniors exceeded the standards in reading, while none did in writing or math.

But statewide, no more than 7 percent of students exceeded the standards in any of the subjects.

Davis had little comment on the test results.

More college visits

School officials here, like those across the state, are hopeful the switch to the test college-bound students typically take will encourage more students to think about college.

Davis is supporting that hope with a program to take THS underclassmen to visit colleges. The visits are funded through a grant from the MELMAC Education Foundation.

The trips give students who might not otherwise consider college a chance to become familiar with what the institutions are like.

This year, he said, the visits will allow sophomores to sit in on classes and tour dormitories.

Among the colleges to be visited: Eastern Maine Community College, Husson, the University of Maine (Orono), Thomas College, Colby College, the University of Maine at Farmington, Kennebec Valley Community College, St. Joseph's, the University of Southern Maine, the University of New England and several colleges in Boston.

Parents are encouraged to go along on the tours, Davis said.

He also noted that MELMAC funding sponsors an SAT preparatory course for juniors and allows all who wish to take the PSAT, a practice test for the SAT.

Nurses, social workers and counselors, including Wayne DuPlessis of Bethel, will take part.

The workshops are sponsored by BFHC, SAD44/Community Education, Western Mountains Senior College, Androscoggin Home Care & Hospice and DuPlessis.

The Way I See It
by Sharon Bouchard
Sharon Bouchard's column is published by special arrangement with the Advertising Department

I know on a few occasions I have picked on the guys a little bit and on a few occasions they deserved it, but I'm here to tell you that there are some occasions where they get very high marks from me.

For example, guys can do things; fix-it type things I mean.

It's strange, but I think it's the same testosterone that makes guys so flaky that also makes them so mechanically inclined. I don't think it's anything that they actually learn as they are growing up. It just seems that once they reach a certain age you can depend on them to fix things that need fixing, not always when you want them fixed, but at least they seem to have a working knowledge of what's broke.

Since my husband had a stroke I have come to realize how many things he used to fix that I don't have a clue about. I always took it for granted that if something didn't work or something needed to be made, he would just do it. Though it was usually on his terms, in his own good time and with a lot of nagging by me, but it eventually would get done.

Now I find myself dependent on the kindness and availability of other guys, primarily my son and son-in-law.

When my husband was in the hospital several years ago I was faced with the challenge of building a wheelchair ramp for the front steps. The hospital gave me a diagram on how to build one which went into slope or grade, angles and strength. They might just as well have given me directions in Greek because it was all gobbledygook, it didn't mean a thing to me. I was in a near state of panic figuring I would never be able to bring Henry home from the hospital because I wouldn't be able to get him into the house.

I called my son Doug and asked him about putting a sheet of plywood over the steps. Well, stupid me, what did I know about bending in the middle or how steep a slope that would create. Fortunately Doug showed up with wood and tools and created a portable wheelchair ramp. I didn't even complain that it weighed 3,000 pounds and takes three men and a boy to put it in place. The fact is, he knew how to make one and I didn't. Now I hope he is willing to do it again because it now needs replacing and I haven't learned any more about slope or grade, angles and strength.

Guys just know that sort of thing.

If something goes wrong with a woman's car, she doesn't ask another woman what might be wrong with it; she asks a guy. And that guy will probably have a pretty good idea what the problem is. In fact, if she asks another guy and yet another guy, they will all have an idea too; only they won't necessarily be the same idea.

If these guys get together to help the lady out, they would all stand around the car looking under the hood and discussing each other's theories on what's wrong. They would then scratch various parts of their bodies and proceed to tinker until they fixed whatever was wrong. And that's the point; they would fix whatever is wrong.

That amazes me. Chances are no one taught them auto mechanics, they just seem to know. They even seem to enjoy it! How they can like getting covered with grease and oil and smashing up their knuckles is beyond me, but they do.

I sure wish I had some of that basic testosterone induced mechanical knowledge; then maybe I would be able to hang my new clock. Putting a clock up sounds like a pretty simple procedure, but I have been told, by guys, that because the clock is heavy, I can't just pound a nail into the wall and hang the darn thing. They say I have to know where the studs are so the clock will have some support. What studs? Where? How do I find them? They also said something about molly bolts or lollybolts or maybe it was anchor bolts. See what I mean? Guys just know that sort of thing.

That's not to say that some women are not mechanically inclined. There are some women who actually have as good if not better aptitudes for fixing things than men. But let's face it ladies, those women are the exception. Most of us don't know a socket from a ratchet and have no desire to learn. After all, we do everything else, why should we be expected to be mechanics and carpenters too?

I think men's ability to fix things and build things is their little insurance policy that us women will always need them for something. And they're right, we do, or at least I do.

The way I see it, if any of you guys are feeling not needed or your masculinity is being threatened by independent women, come on over to my place. I have a clock to be hung, a faucet that drips, a door that sticks and a car that ticks and a wheelchair ramp that needs an upgrade. I can promise you that you will never feel as needed.

Upton

by Eleanor LeComte

I just returned from my early morning walk on the beach. The tide is high and it is deposit-ing large, strange looking jellyfish. They look like gelatinous space ships. A week ago a fair amount of "Portuguese Man of War," jellyfish washed in. These babies can be deadly.

My local pals tell me that Upton is very cold and icy. In fact all the weather maps give New England a chilly forecast. It is a little cold here but really it's like a very good day in early September. My fellow beach strollers were clad in hooded sweatshirts and warm-up pants. You could tell the folks from Maine who were in short sleeves and short pants. We are tough!

There are many flowers blooming, hibiscus, camellias, petunias, pansies, and a spectacular bush down the street with large lily-like blooms. Guess I should have brought the bird and flower books with me.

We were very sorry to hear of the death of Al Gagnon. He had been ill for several months. Al was liked by all. He had many friends and was a very good conversationalist. In his younger years he had many talents and was very strong. When his wife, Connie, died he lost a lot of his "Get up and Go." He will be missed by his many friends and neighbors.

I was amazed to encounter a flock of robins. They were intermingled with some small, unidentified black birds. A hawk was pursuing them as they flew erratically over the area. Really, I have never seen a robin in Florida. They must be around and this was a very large flock. It wasn't half as nice seeing them as it is when the first robin is spotted in Upton in the spring.

The "Bird of the Week" is the good, old, wonderful robin.

Newry

A reminder to WVSC members that a special meeting will be held this Sunday, Jan. 28, at the Town Office at 7 p.m. Plans will be made for the February ride and supper to be held at the Grange Hall on Saturday, Feb. 10. I made a mistake previously giving the wrong date. It is the 10th and it is called the Herb Kittredge Memorial Ride. Right after the ride, which ends at the Grange Hall, the 7th annual Spaghetti and Oyster Stew Supper will be held. Landowners will be our guests at this 5 p.m. supper.

I hadn't seen Officer Taylor in Bethel for a few weeks. In catching up reading the holiday papers I discovered that he had retired as of Jan. 1. He and his wife and dogs were at the recycling center on Sunday and I wished him well in his retirement life.

Happy New Year to cousin Gladys of Rumbold.

About the only thing I can say good about the horrible winds of last weekend is that the caterpillar nests that have been hanging from a tree, and bothering my vision, have finally blown down. I don't ever remember seeing them stay on the trees this late beyond the fall season.

A single and a cardinal pair along with a couple of purple finches are at the feeders. Lots of juncos and goldfinches are enjoying the thistle seeds and sunflower seeds. No wonder there are mice around!

A couple of foxes were observed on the Branch Road recently. They seemed to be enjoying the warmer weather we had then.

Residents should keep their cats close to home knowing the foxes are here and probably will be hungry—I've been told they especially enjoy a re-past of cat.

Also, a friend recently observed a flock of geese flying north. Perhaps they have turned and are heading south by now.

News from the Town Office: The Board of Selectmen meets on the first and third Monday of each month. The planning Board members meet on the first and third Wednesday of each month. Their agendas are posted at the Town Office. If you need more information about these meetings you may call the office at 824-3123. All meetings at the Town Office are open to the public.

Hanover

by Clem Worcester

The Hanover Planning Board had a workshop meeting on Jan. 17. The board worked on the new proposed Shoreland Zoning Ordinance.

Logging operations are underway off the Mill Hill Road in the area known as the "Ball Ground." At one time there was a baseball diamond in that area and the Hanover teams practiced and had games there. There are old pictures that show the teams. Many years ago it was abandoned and had grown into forest. Does anyone know why and when the use as a ballfield was discontinued? The site is near the home of Kimberly Hodgkins.

Several small snowstorms have coated our hills with white. Plowing and sanding kept the roads passable. Temperatures reached as much as 10 degrees below zero several days last week. Howard Pond is frozen over as is the Androscoggin River. Overall it has been an unusually mild winter and officials still say that most ice-covered waters are unsafe to be on.

With the onset of snow, as small as it is, snowmobile enthusiasts are out in force. One snowmobile group from Massachusetts was at Trail's End Motel last weekend.

Stan Gates, formerly of South Paris and a summer resident of Howard Pond, died Jan. 16 in Vermont. In earlier years he had lived in Pennsylvania and raised horses. In 1960 he had a cottage built along South Shore Road in Hanover where he spent much of his time. He was an avid bird watcher and enjoyed having them come to his feeders. Stan Gate's funeral will be Jan. 27, at 11 a.m., at the First Congregational Church, 17 East Main Street in South Paris with visitation Jan. 26, from 6 to 8 p.m., at Weston-Chandler Funeral Home, 45 Main Street, also in South Paris.

Mason

by Richard Grover

Last Thursday, Mona and I returned home after a trip to Florida and a Caribbean cruise. We had a great time, got plenty of sun and visited three islands that we had not seen before. It all began with a plane ride from Portland to Tampa, Fla., in the company of Joe and Peg Perham, Maryvonne and Denny Wheeler and Jane Ryerson. Craig was already there and picked all of us up at the airport in their van. After a couple days in Zephyrhills with friends (The Ryersons and Inmans), we bussed to Ft. Lauderdale with a tour group from just south of Tampa.

Our cruise ship departed Ft. Lauderdale at about 5 p.m. Sunday, and we sailed due east for three days out of sight of land. Finally, we spent the daylight hours of one day on the island of St. Maartin, another day on St. Thomas and a day on Princess Cay in the Bahamas before returning to Ft. Lauderdale on the next Sunday morning. Then there were a couple more days with Jane and Craig in Zephyrhills before we returned to Maine. (More later).

Last weekend (Martin Luther King holiday weekend) the Fourniers, who live up the Kings Highway from here and are building a new house, brought their four children down to "The Farm" to play on the new snow on the hill there. Rupert and Ina approved that idea and were resting in the living room, when both fell asleep in their chairs. After they awoke, the Fourniers had gone home, but they were puzzled by the many kids' tracks in the snow around their house. They assumed the kids had needed to use the bathroom, but had given up when no one came to the door. Next day, Ron Fournier stopped by to help Rupert with his snow thrower. Rupert asked Ron about the tracks. Ron laughed and explained that the whole family had been trying to catch their chickens!

He went on to explain that they have chickens at their home in the woods. Apparently, the chickens had been roosting under their van when the Fourniers came down to play in the snow. When they finished playing in the snow, they found the chickens running loose by the van, and the chickens did not want to be caught. Everybody was puzzled by how or what the chickens found under the van to roost on and how they stayed there for the one-half mile ride to "the farm." My guess is that the chickens must have roosted on the rear axle for their ride.

Mason Kids: After I had written the above story, I got another version from Coulton Williams:

"January 8th was a very interesting day in Mason. Boston invited the Fourniers (Skye, Autumn, Gunner and Orion) over to go sledding at Rupert and Ina's. When they were driving over there, two chickens had hitched a ride on the bottom frame of their vehicle. They did not notice them until they got done sledding. By that time the chickens had run all over the yard. Everybody started chasing the chickens. After about five minutes, they caught one. Monica chased the other one, but could not get a hold of it. It ran under the car. They threw snowballs at the chicken until it came out. Their dad grabbed it, put it in a box with the other chicken and brought them home.

Two weekends ago, Owen Richmond rode a bull! He got bucked off a couple of times. He is OK. He says it is fun, but recommends wearing a helmet."

West Paris

by Joyce Lamb

Good old-fashioned winter weather has arrived. Every morning there is another two or three inches of snow to be cleared from the driveway and walkway. During the day enough sunshine clears the highway so that the traveling is good. One morning it was so slushy, windy, and slippery that the walkers did not venture out.

We are all saddened by the death of Lena Dean. She died on Saturday at the home of Beverly and Vince Stevens where she had been lovingly cared for the past month. She will be missed. The funeral will be at the West Paris Universalist Church where she has been a member for many years.

The Rev. Bob Wolfe will be the guest minister at the West Paris Universalist Church on Sunday, Jan. 28. The service is at 9 a.m., followed by a coffee hour. All are welcome.

I am not ready for a new kitty yet. By spring I may start looking for one. My six children gave me money at Christmas to buy a Himalayan cat like Buffy. Of course one will never be just like him. I have always had cats to live with me. One will not come to the back door and ask to come in as Buffy did.

South Woodstock

by Andrea Wing

Larry Billings, Curator, Woodstock Historical Society, reports that at their meeting everyone enjoyed a video on the coast, supplied by Paul Billings. Members ordered t-shirts and Curator Larry Billings won the mystery package, a book and book light.

The cold weather sure is here with a blast. It's easier when it comes in a little at a time. Lots of birds at our feeders, they have to be filled often.

Kellie came up for a while last Monday; always glad to have her visit. She didn't bring Landon this time, missed him.

Congrats to Corey and Stacy Millett on the birth of a daughter, Megan Irene Millett, born Dec. 21 at Stephens Memorial Hospital. Megan weighed 8 pounds, 3 ounces. Maternal grandparents are Sheryl Morgan and Harold and Dorene Wilbur of South Woodstock. Paternal grandparents are Connie and the late Laurence Millett of Oxford. Megan joins a sister, Mariah, age 8.

Congratulations to Jim, and Marilyn Swan on their celebration of twenty-five years of marriage.

Bethel Historical Society's Regional History Center

Each year, thousands come to visit the Bethel Historical Society's exhibits, lectures, special events and museum. In 2006, recorded visitors came from 37 states, the District of Columbia and eleven foreign nations. Among the states represented were Maine, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Ohio, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Washington, California, Minnesota, Iowa, New Mexico, Georgia, Arizona, Montana, Kansas, Colorado, Wisconsin, West Virginia, Kentucky, Oregon, Tennessee, Illinois, Virginia, Maryland, Idaho, Texas, Nevada, Delaware, Nebraska, Michigan, and Alabama. Foreign nations included Canada, Ireland, Italy, the United Kingdom, Chile, New Zealand, Argentina, Germany, the Czech Republic, Egypt and France.

"We seem to be attracting increasing numbers of foreign visitors," noted Stanley R. Howe, Society executive director. "Our American visitors are also coming from greater distances," he added.

With nearly 1,400 members, the Bethel Historical Society, founded in 1966, is western Maine's largest and most comprehensive full-time historical agency, dedicated to collecting, preserving, and interpreting the regional past for present and future generations. For forty years, the society's activities have included lectures, exhibits, special events, heritage festivals, workshops, conferences, school and educational programs, and publications.

In 1974, the society acquired the former Broad Street residence of Dr. Moses Mason, which now contains a period house museum, exhibit hall and research library. In 1999, the society opened the O'Neil Robinson House (next door at 10 Broad Street) to the public for an expanded exhibit program, museum shop space, and administrative offices. Through the years, the society's achievements have been recognized by a number of state and national organizations.

American Cancer Society

Daffodil Days is coming to the northern Oxford County area in March. The American Cancer Society is looking for volunteers during February and March to assist in taking orders, packing, and delivering daffodils. To help fight cancer by volunteering with the Daffodil Days program or to place an order, contact Ray Kautzman at 207-373-3724 or the American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345, anytime day or night.

Daffodil Days is one of the American Cancer Society's oldest and most beloved fundraising programs.

For more than 30 years, Daffodil Days has enabled individuals, small businesses, corporations, schools, faith-based groups, and other community organizations to join the Society's fight against cancer by raising money and sharing hope for a future without this disease.

In the past 12 years alone, Daffodil Days has raised nearly $200 million nationwide. In 2006, residents from all over Maine helped the Society raise over $225,000 through the sale of these beautiful yellow flowers.

Gould 34, Averill 8; Jan. 22—A strong effort on the boards helped lift the Gould Huskies to a 34-8 win over Averill on Monday night. Sophomore Katie Smith and senior Carol Lin each had thirteen rebounds to dominate the paint. On the offensive end, the Huskies put together a balanced scoring attack. Seana Siekman and Ally Flynn led the charge with seven each, while Kate Roberti and Carol Lin added six each. Sophomore Katie Gibson contributed five, including a long-range three to start the second half. Gould improved to 6-5 and will next face Hyde on Wednesday.

Gould 30, Hyde 43; Jan. 19—Hyde jumped out to a 20-7 lead in the first quarter, thanks in part to the long range shooting of Chelsea Malen. Malen finished the game with 13 points, but had three treys in the first quarter. Gould continued to hustle and fought back to within ten points in the fourth quarter. However, Hyde's pressure and athleticism were just too much. Michaela Cummings led Gould with 12 points, while Kate Roberti had eight and Carol Lin six.

Gould 33, Greater Portland Christian School, 37; Jan. 18—Gould fell to Greater Portland Christian School on Wednesday night at the Baxter School, 37-33. The difference in the game was rebounding, as GPCS got many second chances and outrebounded the Huskies. The Gould women had some costly turnovers in the third period that allowed GPCS to take a 27-22 lead. However, the team finished the game strong, and came close in the fourth quarter. Kate Roberti led the Huskies with 12 points, while Michaela Cummings added 9. Carol Lin finished the game as the high rebounder.

out scoring them 12-6. At one point the Rebels were ahead by 13 points. The Tigers fought back and rattled the Rebels ending up with the win by a score of 41-36. Great passes were made by Nicena Walker and Kayla Merrill. Lyndsay Merrill played the best offensive game. She was able to get herself and her teammates open the whole game. This was by far the best game played by the whole team. The first meeting against the Tigers was a losing battle for the Rebels by a score of 44-22. Telstar currently has a 1-6 record. SCHOOL NEWS FROM AROUND THE DISTRICT

Local LEGO Robotics Team Brings Home a Trophy!

It took a lot of hard work, but the NANO Knights, that is, the LEGO robotics team, brought home a programming trophy on Saturday, December 9th after competing in a state-wide competition. After months of programming and building their robots (made with LEGO bricks) the team competed with 23 other teams at Jay High school in Jay, Maine. Teams from all over southern, central, and western Maine were there to compete. In fact, teams all over the United States and the world will compete in similar competitions. The winning team from Maine will be able to compete with the top teams from all over the world and the United States in Georgia sometime later this school year.

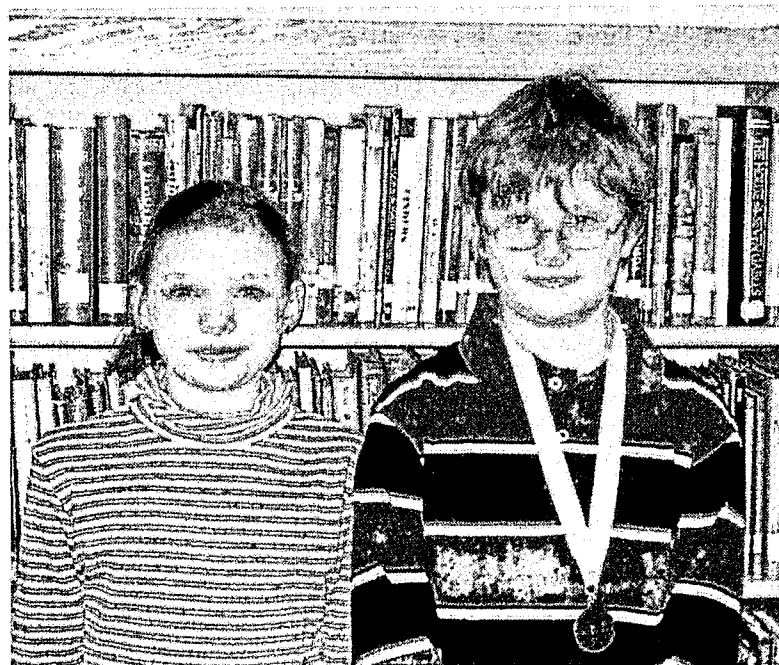

The local NANO Knights made it to the semi-finals in their tabletop competition, the actual performing of the robots, and took first place in the programming category. This is the third year that LEGO robotics has taken place as part of the Mahoosuc Kids Association after school program at Crescent Park School. Last year the team took home second place in the "robot design" category. Two years before our program began Andover Elementary competed in the same competition. Woodstock also competed one year.

The teams are given a theme each year, this year it was nano-technology. The students were asked to research a specific problem that may be solved in the future by this relatively new technology. The NANO Knights made their presentation into a 3-minute skit which they performed in front of judges. We ran into a lot of problems throughout our research and programming. We spent many afternoons problem solving and perfecting our programming and skit.

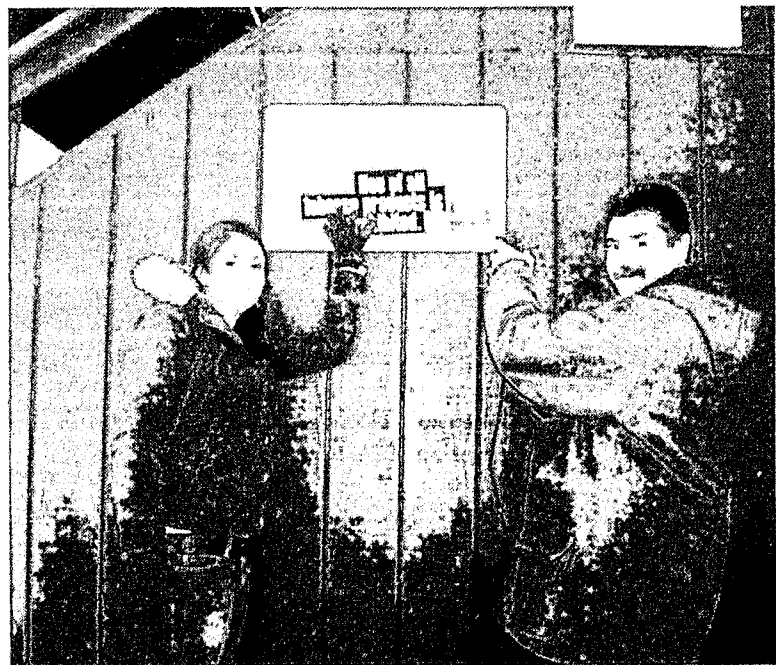

Team members this year included, Tyler Cherkis, Cathryn Haberman-Fake, Sam Corriveau, Andra Risko, Justin Stearns, Kiersten Drapeau, all in 5th grade at CPS, Avery Rossow, and Matthew Keane who attend Telstar Middle school.

Each year for the past three years the Mahoosuc Kid's Association has generously supported our program. Between the entry fees, field set-up kit, national registration, and team t-shirts, the program can get costly. We greatly appreciate their continued support.

A big thank you to all of the parents who drove out to cheer us on! Congratulations NANO knights! You are awesome!

Woodstock School held its school-level National Geography Bee on January 4th. Seven students from grades four and five competed to be the school champion. Pictured here are Runner-up Aislinn Forbes and Champion Nicholas Johnson wearing his Geo-Bee Championship Medal. Nicholas will take a seventy question written test to see if he qualifies to compete in the State Geography Bee later in the spring.

While home on Christmas Break, Chelsea Cozzolino and her dad, Brock, chairman of the Woodstock Recreation Committee put up the new signs from Healthy Maine Partnership to let people know the ball fields and other Recreation Areas in Woodstock are now Tobacco-Free. Chelsea worked on the policy with Carol Emery, Partnership Director of Project NOW: Northern Oxford Wellness, last year while she was a senior at Telstar High School. Woodstock joins the 50+ towns in the state to have tobacco-free policies.

The students in Mrs. Sabin's kindergarten class at CPS recently wrote to children's author and illustrator Tedd Arnold with suggestions for a new Huggly book. They were very sad when the last Huggly story came to an end and thought it would be great if Mr. Arnold would write another one for them to enjoy. He graciously responded to our e-mail and asked us to send him a copy of our suggestions and accompanying illustrations. Pictured above are students holding copies of their favorite Tedd Arnold stories.

SWANS CELEBRATE 25TH

A surprise 25th wedding anniversary celebration took place recently at the Town & Country Restaurant in Gorham, N.H., for Jim and Marilyn Swan. The anniversary bash and elaborate dinner event was planned by sister of the bride, Teresa Curtis. At her side as an available advisor and the gatherer of the many family photos and addresses was the couple's daughter, Sarah. The photos were used in a very memorable music video presentation compiled by the bride's brother, Bob Brown. A tasty cake of delicate mauve and burgundy roses was made by the bride's sister, Suzanne Atkinson. Natalie Hilpert, sister of the bride, assisted Teresa with the decorations for the event, as well as Suzie Harrington, a long-time friend of the groom, who donated the balloon table centerpieces. Deb Swan, sister-in-law of the couple, and Milly Akers, sister of the groom, were also a great help to Teresa in the planning of the occasion. Vivian Glover, the bride's long-time friend and maid of honor, made the fragrant rose centerpieces arranged in crystal glass vases. Linda Howe, a long-time friend of the bride and of the couple, arranged for a band that played for the guests' dining and dancing pleasure. The couple was chauffeured to the evening surprise event by friends, Steve and Kim Swasey, as well as John and Linda Percival. The event would not have been complete without the presence of the couple's two sons, Bion and Mike Swan, as well as the bride's mother, Sandra Brown, and the groom's long-time friend and the couple's best man, Ralph Harrington. Making the evening complete were the couple's many family and friends. In honor of their 25th, the couple took a trip to the beautiful countryside of Pennsylvania. Pictured here in Gettysburg, they enjoyed the sights of the historical city. The couple went on to enjoy the beauty of the Amish countryside of Lancaster; while there, they enjoyed a horse and buggy ride and a traditional Pennsylvania Dutch style meal. The couple attended a wine tasting and tour of a winery in the town of Intercourse. Their last stop in Pennsylvania was a visit to Hershey Park, "Chocolate Lover's World," in Hershey. The couple made a visit to the home of long-time family friends of the groom in Connecticut, then visited the Mystic Marine Aquarium in Mystic, Conn. The bride is a graduate of OHHS and is currently a full-time RN nursing student at the University of Maine at Augusta. The groom is a graduate of Telstar Regional High School and is currently employed at Swasey Excavation of Andover, where he has been employed for more than 20 years. The groom is a seventh generation Swan residing on the family property in Bethel at Swan's Corner, where the couple lives and has raised their family.

A Special Thank You

The children and families of Gerry (Hart) Phelps would like to thank all who have helped our Mom and us get through this difficult time. The caring staff at Stephens Memorial, Market Square Health Care Center, Beacon Hospice Nurses, Andrews Funeral Home, Pastor Larry Hodgkins and all our family and friends. We wouldn't have made it without all of you by our side.

Thanks Again,

Family gatherings held a special place in her heart along with gatherings of her many friends.

Asked to go out for a meal, you could be sure she was ready to go. Always a joy to all, she never had a bad word for anyone.

The family wishes to thank the caregivers at Androscoggin Home Health and Hospice and many friends and family who have visited and provided other support during her illness.

Funeral services were held at the West Paris Universalist Church on Tuesday, Jan. 16, with Marilyn Hammond officiating. Spring burial will be in Kearsarge, N.H. Memorials in her memory are requested to the West Paris Universalist-Unitarian Church, P.O. Box 36, West Paris, ME 04289.
